Precious and her sister attend a school in Kampala Uganda, run by a local church. The pastor started the church, because he realized many families could not afford to send their children to school due to the cost of uniforms and supplies. Some of the children even lived on the streets and had no one to care for them, let alone be concerned about their education. Precious has a disease that affects her blood. The disease causes her to be tired and lethargic, even fainting and passing out at times. When she started attending the school and eating the rice meals, she immediately began to feel better and grow stronger. Patrick, the head master at her school, said the meals make a difference. In fact, the teachers and staff can tell which children have been receiving the meals for more than 4 weeks by how healthy and alert they are in school, compared to the children who have just started receiving food.
